

A system and method for identifying each of a plurality of service providers cooperating to provide a service to a customer wherein a fee debited from a stored value account associated with the customer is apportioned among the cooperating service providers according to a measurement of the provided service portions.